

New Moon

Long, long ago when the Earth was new, there lived a young man named Nara. There was nothing on Earth, everything was bare, no trees, no plants, nothing, just Nara, the sky and the earth. Nara was lonely, and had nobody to talk to, so every night he would talk to the moon. He would tell the moon everything he felt, believed, discovered and cherished and it would make him feel better within himself. But he knew deep down that he was still lonely and unwanted and the moon probably wasn't even listening to him.

One hot, summer's night Nara was sitting on the ground waiting for the moon to appear. He waited, and waited and waited a little more until he realised that the moon was lost! He panicked and started crying, thinking that he had lost his only friend. Suddenly a gush of wind sent Nara's hair flying in all directions, ^{this was} followed by a loud THUMP, which made Nara jump in fright. He looked to his left and there stood a beautiful woman who had fallen from the sky. This was strange for Nara because he had never seen another living thing before.

Good use of quotations
Taylor

"Hello Nara, my name is Moon. I saw how lonely you were and decided to come down here for the night and keep you company" the beautiful woman kindly said. She was angelic in every single way, her voice was as soft as a mouse and her wavy blonde hair was just stunning. Nara smiled, although inside he was leaping with joy.

great
metaphor

That night Nara and Moon talked, laughed and had fun; a feeling that Nara had never felt before. But as the sun rose it was time for Moon to leave.

"Goodbye Nara, I'm always up in the sky if you ever need a chat. And don't worry, I listen to everything".^{NL} Before Nara could blink his eyes Moon was gone. From that day forward Nara always knew within himself that he was never alone and that there was always someone watching over him, every move he made.

So every time there is no moon in the sky, remember it means that Moon has come down to Earth to accompany and make someone's life better. Make someone feel new within themselves; more confident and happy. That is why it is called a 'New Moon'